Dear Professor Lampakis

Whilst you were still here I was taken ill, and lay a week in bed with continual fever. Whilst ill I wrote to wish you good-bye, but my messenger found that you had left the day before. I am better now, but find it difficult to do all my work, & seem unable to find any time or strength to revisit my Greek friends, or do anything in the cause of reunion. Our Bishop will be soon here, & will I am sure be glad to hear of all we did together. I wish that I could do more, but school-work takes up so much time. All I can do now is to tell you again how much we desire re-union: and to promote it as far as possible by conquering our own faults that we may be more worthy of God. And now I must send my kind regards & my wife's to you & your wife. I wish I could write more, but I have much work before me.

yours very sincerely

Arthur. S. Flichen.
